THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 22. They Tackled Big Game.

William Roberts brings a story from the mountains north of Mountain Home, Ark., of an adventure had by two gir's, which would have had a ture had by two girls, which would have had a fatal ending had it not been for the nerve displayed by one of them. Mary Welles and Julia Roberts live on adjoining farms and are great friends. They are both typical Arksnsas girls and can handle a rifle better than most man in their neighborhood, and are so confident of their neighborhood, and are so confident of their recovers that they do not hesitate to tackle the and can handle a rifle better than most man in their neighborhood, and are so confident of their prowess that they do not hesitate to tackle the biggest game to be found in the woods. They frequently go hunting ard stay out all night in the woods, camping wherever darkness c teless them. It was during one of these hunting excursions that the sdounture spoken of was had. The girls went away early in the morning and told their folks that they might probably be gone over in ht, as they wished to see if they could get sims wild turkeys, and they were compelled to be on the ground very early in the morning. They went to the place where they knew the turkeys were and built a blind ard lay there waiting. During the night they were swakened by some large animal which was nosing around their resting place, and as it was too dark to see Mary grasped a club and made a stoke at the intruder, which proved to be a bear and which was hit on the nose by the blow. The animal was maddened by the pair and made a dash at the girls grasping Mary by the a m. She screamed, and as she was being diagged away Julia cother gun and ran close to the animal, pacing the muzzle of the shoteun, which had a charge of turkey shot, bewas being diagged away Julia cot her sun and ran close to the animal, placing the muzzle of the shotgun, which had a charge of turkey shot, behind his shoulder, and fired, tharing a hole clear through the brute. He dropped dead in his trasks. With the exception of a few bruies and a slightly lacerated arm Mary was unharmed, and the girls stayed at their post, and in the morning were rewarded by bagging three fine turkeys which came too near their blind
